A 3./s.Pz.Abt. 510, Rengershausen, Germany, April, 1945

One of six factory-fresh tanks that were delivered to 3./s.Pz.Abt. 510 in late March, 1945, in Kassel as a replacement for vehicles lost in previous battles. This unit moved to Kassel from Kuronsk at that time. These tanks, under the command of Hptm. Hellpup, participated in the defense of Kassel in the period from March 30 to April 5, 1945. On the very first day of fighting, he knocked out six US tank destroyers near Fritzlar. On April 2, German tanks attacked advancing American armored vehicles (1st Battalion, 318th IR) and managed to destroy six of them for the loss of one Tiger II. 3./s.Pz.Abt. 510 was disbanded on April 17, 1945. The 'Ambush' camouflage scheme is well visible in photos of this Tiger II. This type of camouflage was regularly used from late 1944 /early 1945 to March, 1945.

B 3./s.Pz.Abt. 511, Kassel, Germany, 1945

This vehicle was destroyed on April 5, 1945, probably by an American tank destroyer from the 702nd TD Bn. The driver Rudi Kaiser was killed during this incident. The rare camouflage scheme depicted is known as 'Octopus' thanks to the green rings painted on the European Yellow base. The origin of this scheme is not clear, and may have come about due to the shortage of time to apply the camouflage, or may have resulted from the lack of red-brown paint in stock. The swastika on the front armor plate was painted after the war, probably by some Allied soldier as it's beams are oriented in the wrong direction. As well as other Tiger IIs in this kit, the transport tracks (Verlandekette) are mounted.
